A roung man who gave his girl a $75 gold watch last Christmas, married her during the summer, and now he thinks the present was "time" well spent.

Now comes the season when the young man, on an eight dollar salary, bothers his brains to raise the stamps to get his girl a twenty dollar holiday present.—

Chairmas falls on Saturday this year, and severe storms are predicted. The storm will likely break when the young-ters wake up and find their stockings filled with chunks of coal.

The morning dawns, and the household is awakened by the sound of drum and fife. But it is not war. It is not the summons to go out and slaughter the Zulus. Nay, brethren, it is Christmas.—New York Express.

As Christmas approaches, the young man who has been toasting his toes, and lounging on the best parlor sofa, begins to try and get up a quarrel with his young girl so as to escape bankrupting himself on a Christmas present.—

Now comes Christmas to remind us we may make our lives sublime, and departing, leave behind us scores of alippers, numbered "nine."—Stillwater Lumberman. Slippers that perhaps another who shall in your footsteps tread—a preferred and bigger brother—may wish they were "tens" instead.—Rome Sentimel. Slippers that perhaps a mother, striving hard to make ends meet, will use upon your wild young brother, because he won't keep off the street.

In Scotland, except among Catholics and Church of England people, Christmas is scarcely noticed. Other denominations who notice the season, defer the rejoicings to Twelfth (old Christmas) day.

A Scotchman, who was asked how Christrejoicings to Twelfth (old Christmas) day.

A Scotchman, who was saked how Christmas was spent in his country, replied:

"Hoot, awa, mon, we dinns mind the Yule—the Christmas ye ca' it, mon. A'

every mon who can afford it gets drunk."

every mon who can afford it gets drunk."

"On, yes, wait till Christmas," snarled the youthful scion, "that's always the way. If I want a new sled, wait till Christmas; a pair of skates, wait till Christmas. I waited last year, and I didn't get sled or skates either. Nothing but a book with a red cover and a little beby eard with verses onto it. Christmas is a fraud. Boys never get nothing they want," and he mentally resolved that he would write to the President and have him omit his Christmas proclamation this year.

OUND TO HAVE A GOOD DINNER.

"Have you the heart to turn a cold shoulder on squalid poverty in Christmas times, when all the bells are chiming for joy; when little children caper in happiness over toys, from which they will suck the paint and cry with the stomach ache to-morrow; when every heart is full of praise and gratitude, hijarity and sociability, purse-strings lax, and tables groaning with the fat of the land; have you got the hardshood, mum, to offer a poor unfortunate starying pilgrim cold mutton scraps, sour potatoes and stale bread, when the smell of turkey covers the whole honse with a sweet odor, and every breeze that sails through the streets goes laden with the spicery of toothsome cookery?"

"That's a precious sight better than you deserve, "said the lady of the house, "and I hain't got nothing more for you. Eat it up and move on."

"Can you expect that providence will continue to lavish upon you the blessings of comfort and luxury, if you do not in a time like this of general festivity and feasting share with the feeble mendicant that totters to your door, a few crumbs and seasonable tid-bits from your table of abundance, to remind his ahriveled palate of the joys of youth and the vicissitudes of after life?" said the blear-eyed vagrant, in plaintive tones.

"You're a lazy, good-for-nothing vagabond—and ought to be ashamed to eat bread you didn't earn," said the woman, impatiently.

"That ain't it it," resumed the tramp.

impatiently.

"That ain't it it," resumed the tramp.

"I ask you, as a Christian woman, and the mother of innocent children that may some day walk in my footsteps, if you don't think the leg of a turkey, with an unmistakable suggestion of dressing, and maybap a dish of cranberries to heighten the scenic effect, with a cup of coffer for company, and a warm biscuit or two for sociability, would be about the square thing on an occasion like the present?"

the square thing on an eccasion like the present?"

"No, I don't, you lazy loafer. You don't deserve a crust."

"Or say, perhaps a half dozen fried ovsters, the breast of a chicken, a slice of venison, with a touch of jelly for background, three or four sweet potatoes, a parsnip, or slice of squash, maybe, with a few selections from your assortment of cake thrown in for generality's sake. Don't that strike you as coming a little more near the embodiment of genuine charity than this froth of the garbage box you have asked me to soil my stomach with?"

"Stop your gab, and clear out, or you shan't have a bite. That's all I have got for you. Dinner won't be done for two hours," said the woman, getting mad.

"I don't wish to be importunate, mum, but I wouldn't for the world have the enjoyment of this happy day marred by the thoughts of remorse which will be sure to break in upon you, by and by, when your overloaded stomach begins to attract attention, and make you regret that you did not lessen the temptation to indulge in table excess by sharing your bounty with the humble and hungry waif before you. As for this stuff you've offered me—though I'm suffering tortures for want of food—I have too much self-respect to waste my time on much self-respect to waste my time on it to-day. I started out for a Christmas dinner that was worth the name, and I'll find it if I have to work for it. Good day, mum, and a Happy New Year to you—over the left."

A Christmas Snowball.

A Christmas Snowball.

Snowballs filled with Christmas gifts is a late idea of holiday humor. A frame of whalebone or wires in halves is filled with toys and bon-bons, covered with thick paper, the halves lightly fastened together and covered with pure white wadding. The balls may be made small and the fun of pelting the family with them forms part of the ceremonies of Christmas morning, the ball flying open and scattering the presents over the receiver's head. Or a huge snowball is made and rolled into the room, as part of the Christmas tree festivities. The semi-circular whalebone or crinoline "dress improvers" can be put to good use for improvers" can be put to good use for snowballs in their way by joining a pair and covering round with cotton.
